NEXT, Watch my tutorial on how to create your Meme

The image shows a browser window with a Google search for "roy lichtenstein". The search results display a grid of various artworks in the Pop Art style, including portraits of women, abstract compositions, and comic book-style illustrations. One specific result is highlighted, showing a large image of a woman's face with a tear, titled "Happy Tears (Lichtenstein) - Wikipedia". Below the main image, there are sections for "Related images" and "Wikipedia" information. The Wikipedia section includes the title "Happy Tears (Lichtenstein) - Wikipedia" and a brief description: "Images may be subject to copyright. Learn More". The "Related images" section shows several smaller versions of the "Happy Tears" artwork. The browser's address bar shows the search URL: https://www.google.com/search?q=roy+lichtenstein&source=imrs&btn=isch&sa=X&ved=2ahUKEwJDpr1579ToAhXOPM0KHQf9BocQ_AJ0AXoECCMQAw&biw=1645&bih=...

What we thought online
learning
would be like

when your mom says
take a walk

But only in the back yard.

A painting of a man with a shocked expression, used as a meme background. The man has a wide-eyed, open-mouthed look, and his skin appears pale and somewhat distorted. The background is a mix of blue and yellow tones, suggesting an indoor setting with a window or door.

When I see my friends for the first time after quarantine

And I don't even recognize them anymore when you have a bad hair day

And you have to go on a google meet later

When you start over thinking a question in class

When someone coughs , sneezes, or comes within six feet of me:
